Samuel Johnson famous defined the essack as 'an irregular, indigenous piece, not a regular performance and order.' And certainly, a number of exercises (Hazlitt and Emerson, for example, after the Montaigne mode) are readily identified by the road nature or fragmented in their exploration. But each of these writers observed certain distinct organizations (or disorganized) principles in his own mind, thus charing the ram and shaking of the form. As Jeanette Harris observed in Expressive Discourse, 'Even in the case of a personal esscalation, which may appear informal and courageous, the writer has been crafted with this very appearance care of informality'(122). Dissertation University of Georgia, 1991 Getty Images Hi, my name is young, and I do not use a cell phone. I also don't have my own laptop, desktop, iPad, iPod, or an e-reader of any kind. Don't look for me on Facebook or Vine. And forget about a Finsta, since I don't care how regular The Insta is working. As for Twitter, I had to join him this year for a written placement but I had only tweeted once -- and had made several mistakes in the process. I hear LinkedIn could be useful to me as a freelancer, and that cards will let folks know where I'm eating Thai food this evening. But frankly, I'd rather grind cooked grinder than figure out this app -- or any other. I hate technology. It's the interview of my existence. I am content to be left behind. Of course, I have access to above-mentioned devices and social media platforms. My husband Billy passed along his old laptop so I can use it for work send emails (even though I said no one likes email anymore, it's all about textures, sigh...). It also has an iPad when or is it an air iPad? I'm not sure if it's the first or second version (or what it even means), but it looks pretty nifty in case of its violet. My 16-year-old daughter received a Kindle Pawhite for her born last year and helped me download a novel (I can't charge anything up and down, or sidewalk). This seemed like a good idea at the time (the book was all the light we can't see, a great chance for more than 500 pages). But I had to ask strangers full on the path for help with the 'bookmark' option. There's also a way to make the screen brighter, the font bigger, and look up words I don't know, but I'll condemn if I figure this out. Give me a real book any day of the week (I am the proud owner of four libraries from a couple of fine institutions). The TV appearance in our basis has HD capabilities, though I'd owned it for several years before a guest at a Super Bowl Party showed me how to turn on this feature (add 7 before the channel -- who knew?). Yes, I would watch Ranger hockey with Wimbledon all this time in standard definition. I've also told the TV is 'smart', which means it's possible through current entertainment in the internet. I'm devoted to Home of Cards and would like to be watching it now, but of course I can't be devoted to getting a Roku (or learn how to install it). Guess I'll just sit tight and wait for it out on good old fashioned disk (just a few more months!) I can, however, record TV shows, which can lead you to believe that I am up to date on Best Call Saul and Male Mad. But, ay, when I clicked to watch a programme recently -- recently the installation of excellent crime series BBC American series Broadchurch -- I realized that it stopped recording after only three episodes. I called almost crying. Billy rolled his eyes in dirty heads, low-tech life and tried to foist his old phone on me. I have it at my goal, but it's never loaded. People called me so often that he recorded a message saying, Don't let a voice mail here for June -- just call him at home. Isn't that what the arena line is? Should they teach the rule of my life? Why are phones still getting wet and texts still flying? And carriages must be mixed? No, thanks -- I don't want Skype with you or play Scrabble-like online games or be added to Google+. Call me crazy, but I'm happy to live without technology (wait, you can't call -- my phone is dead!) Just try me in the house. Or knock on my door. That's right, I don't have a door either...
